
■ ON SIGNS OF FREITAG

The original copy of the copy of the original

Something that started in the fall of 1993 as the one-of-kind FREITAG in a shared apartment in Zurich has developed into a company that brings unique recycled bags to the streets, from Europe to Asia. Then, as now, we've been driven by the notion of keeping used materials in circulation for as long as possible. And, in the future, even closing the cycles. On our 30th anniversary, we reflect on our beginnings and, as a tribute, copy the counterfeit that made the FREITAG bag an original.

■ THE FIRST BAG

For three decades, our bags have stood not only for design and functionality but also for the re-source-saving use of materials and durability. The first Original Messenger Bag, which made its debut in our Archive collection in 2000, has given rise to an extensive range of bags and accessories.

For some models today, we combine used truck tarp with recycled PET textile or ß-stock airbags, and we even offer a circular smartphone protective sleeve made of worn-out ski boots. Always true to our corporate philosophy: «We think and act in cycles».

■ SUDDENLY, THE BAG WAS IN A SUPERMARKET

Let's jump back to year three of our story: In 1997, Markus Freitag went shopping at a branch of one of Switzerland's largest supermarket chains. Suddenly, somewhere between the carrots and the cucumbers, he saw a bag that looked suspiciously like his own. It was a copy of the FREITAG bag. Except this one was called «Donnerstag», and was mass-produced from flimsy nylon plastic.

Sure, they'd copied the bag, but not the idea behind a FREITAG bag. This bag was neither unique nor recycled, and it probably wasn't all that durable. It wasn't to much the day of the week (in German, Donnerstag means «Thursday») that was different, but the choice of materials, the production method and the belief behind the product.

The supermarket's counterfeit caused a stir and was a big headache for our still pretty small bag-making operation, which at that time was working on a 100 sq.m studio in the Maag complex in Zurich. But it also led to a lot of publicity. Many people sent us letters of sympathy from Paris and Tokyo, which was also taken up by the media, the retailer took the copy off its shelves and promised never again to name bags after days of the week.

■ INSPIRED BY BAG AND BELIEF

The culture of copying is omnipresent, not only in music, art or literature but also in design and fashion. And with our unique product and increasingly widespread recognition, we are an attractive and probably attracting imitations. Some limit themselves to sewing the characteristic black-and-white FREITAG label on their products, others copy entire bags down to the smallest detail, even when it comes to naming. The list of copies like «FERITLA», «MACHENMEIS», or «FREIN-TAG» is long.

Fortunately, some of the imitators take their inspiration both from the form and our beliefs and likewise focus on reusing materials or environment- friendly production processes.

■ AN HOMAGE TO THE COPY

As a tribute to this turning point in the then-still young history of the company, the copy from back then will be reintroduced in a limited edition as the F13 D OPY CAP.

The Donnerstag label will be placed where the FREITAG logo is usually positioned. So, after at least 25 years, the copy will finally be allowed to carry the name of the original. And in the profile to to the social initiative of a Swiss retailer. And, of course, this time around, the bags are made of recycled truck tarps, so befits a FREITAG original.

■ THE CROWDFUTURA SERVE ART (FPA)

But that's not all: from September 19 to 30, with the invaluable support of designer Leandro Destefani, we'll be turning the store at Hardbrücke, the birthplace of the first FREITAG bag, into a supermarket.

Using objects salvaged from various secondhand platforms such as a vegetable display case, a cash register, a refrigerated counter and a checkout counter, a supermarket that, in reality, won't be hooked up to power, we'll be transforming the FREITAG Flagship Store into an almost real supermarket for the Zurichmarket Weeks.

■ THE CIRCULAR TRUCK TARP

Since 2020, together with other industrial partners, we've been developing a circular truck tarp that can be fully recycled over and over again. The first prototypes are already out on the road in the cycle. The first prototypes designed to close the technical material cycle are already out on their first test run.

■ THE CIRCULAR SHOWPACK

In the summer of 2023, we embarked on a new cycle and sent the first circular backpack, made entirely without truck tarp, into production. Our latest circular development, Mono[PA6], consists exclusively of polyamide 6.

We've given worn-out ski boots a next life as circular iPhone® protectors by the name of CIRC-CASE and combined the cellphone case with the customized F360 JUSTIN card holder made of truck tarp to create the sustainable CIRC-CASE system. In the process, we work together with various partners in Switzerland.
